VERIZON

Verizon, the US telephone carrier relocated its Tokyo office to the Pacific Century Place in Tokyo’s prestigious Marunouchi business district.

Verizon occupies little less than one floor, the total floor area is around 1200m2. A generous welcoming reception space against the backdrop of the Tokyo skyline leads to the back-office with a variety of collaboration spaces supporting different work situations. Free address desks form the backbone of a new work-style concept. Themed common areas divide the different departments and define the identity of the space. Bright colors and natural materials, complementary to the technical nature of Verizon’s business transform the office into a warm and welcoming space maximizing the quality for Verizon’s staff.

NBCUNIVERSAL ENTERTAINMENT JAPAN

NBCUniversal Entertainment Japan took the opportunity to rethink their office concept from the scratch after moving out from a space with a fit out taken over from the previous tenant. Key theme was to reestablish the connection to NBCUniversal's business and to communicate it in an adequate manner. Colors and subdued lighting are reminders of the atmosphere in a movie theatre. The lounge next to the reception is the key hub of the office encouraging collaboration between staff and with outside business partners. The entire office space is branded while maintaining a clean practicability for the entertainment company on the forefront of the industry.
